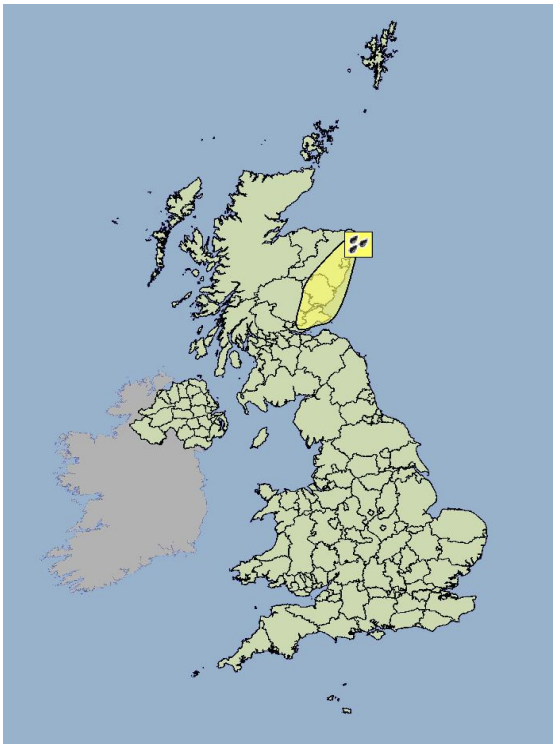
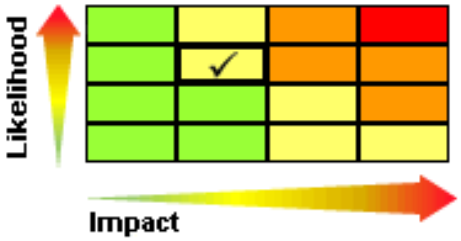
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
An active frontal system will push up from the south on Friday night and Saturday morning, only slowly clearing north later on Saturday. 20-30mm of rain is expected to fall quite widely while some areas could see around 40mm, mainly over the higher ground. A short period of snow is possible on higher ground above 300-400m before it turns to rain.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:05 on Sat, 04th Mar 2017 until 23:00 on Sat, 04th Mar 2017

Rain will turn persistent and occasionally heavy across parts of eastern Scotland, bringing the risk of localised flooding on Saturday.
